Suffolk and the Tudors: Politics and Religion in an English County 1500-1600

This study throws new light on the relationship between the counties and central government, and on the changing political and religious views of both the gentry and people at the time of the English Reformation. Winner of the Royal Historical Society’s Whitfield Prize.

Suffolk and the Tudors 1500-1600

Diarmaid MacCulloch 1986

This study throws new light on the relationship between the counties and central government, and on the changing political and religious views of both the gentry and people at the time of the English Reformation.

The Reformation and the Towns in England

John M. Thompson 1969

The book challenges several popular views about the Reformation and shows how the lives of people living in a recreant community were affected by the religious changes of the sixteenth century. It also explores the complex relationship between the town council and the reformers and assesses the impact of the Reformation on the town’s economy.

Making the English Reformation

Jeffrey H. Green 1987

This book challenges several popular views about the Reformation and shows how the lives of people living in a recreant community were affected by the religious changes of the sixteenth century. It also explores the complex relationship between the town council and the reformers and assesses the impact of the Reformation on the town’s economy.

Suffolk and the Tudors 1500-1600

Diarmaid MacCulloch 1986

This study throws new light on the relationship between the counties and central government, and on the changing political and religious views of both the gentry and people at the time of the English Reformation. Winner of the Royal Historical Society’s Whitfield Prize.

Suffolk and the Tudors 1500-1600

Diarmaid MacCulloch 1986

This study throws new light on the relationship between the counties and central government, and on the changing political and religious views of both the gentry and people at the time of the English Reformation. Winner of the Royal Historical Society’s Whitfield Prize.
Women, Religion and Education in Early Modern England

Women, Religion and Education in Early Modern England is a study of the nature and extent of the education of women in the context of both Protestant and Catholic ideological debates. Examining the role of women both as recipients and agents of religious instruction, the author assesses the nature of power invested in women through religious education, and the constraints and freedoms this brought.